Man beaten in south end street scrap

ATTACK Police are searching for several suspects after a man was injured in a fight in the city's southeast end early yesterday.

At around 1:30 a.m. yesterday, police responded to a report of a fight in the 2300 block of Russell Road, where they found a man suffering from head injuries. He was taken to hospital, where he remained yesterday in stable condition with non-life-threatening injuries, said east division Sergeant Russ Hrabchak.

Police believe a weapon was used in the attack, but they are still unsure of what kind of weapon it was, Hrabchak said.

Police have yet to take any suspects into custody, but are seeking several people. The investigation is continuing.

Call east division police at 613-236-1222 ext. 3212, with information.

A member of a Canadian Air Force honour guard bows his head in remembrance during a fly-past of vintage World War II aircraft — Spitfires and a Hurricane, led by an Avro Lancaster — at a ceremony to mark the 68th anniversary of the Battle of Britain yesterday, at the Canadian Aviation Museum.

City ceremony recalls battle

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

In the fall of 1940, German planes were bombarding English cities relentlessly, hoping to break the nation's air defence and citizens' morale.

Nazi barges and paratroopers were poised to invade, but after months of battle a multinational Royal Air Force prevailed in the Battle of Britain, in which Canadian flying aces and ground crews made a large contribution.

At Ottawa's Canadian Aviation Museum yesterday, British High Commissioner Anthony Cary marked the battle's 68th anniversary at a ceremony that commemorated the Canadian contribution to the victory.

Of the 2,900 pilots who flew in the Battle of Britain, 103 were Canadian. But even above the pilots, another 2,000 Canadians who worked as ground crew were credited with helping tip the scales for the Allies.

"The Luftwaffe had superiority in aircraft numbers in July 1940, but the Allies were much better able to repair damaged planes and throw them back in the battle," Cary said.

"By the end, the problem wasn't with the planes, but finding a trained pilot."

"It came so close," said Charley Fox, a Canadian Spitfire pilot, who flew in World War II. "They had no more reserves. They were so short of trained pilots, that as the battle progressed they cut back on training from six months, down to one month, then down to weeks."

Fox said some pilots hadn't even fired their guns prior to taking to the air in battle.

Grits put pricetag on promises

Election 2008

The Liberals are to release their campaign platform today, spelling out how they plan to pay for their big-ticket promises.

The announcement will flesh out previously announced programs — estimated by opponents to cost more than $80 billion so far if ever implemented — and build around the Green Shift environmental plan, which features a tax on fossil fuels while cutting income taxes to cushion the blow.

The Liberals say the platform, A Richer, Fairer, Greener Canada, will be fully costed and fiscally responsible. "A Liberal government will never put Canada into deficit. Period," the party said in a statement yesterday.

"We are committed to balanced budgets, which is why all the commitments in this platform are set within a prudent fiscal framework."

That includes a contingency reserve of $3 billion a year, to be applied to the debt if it's not used.

The plan will carry the party through to the Oct. 14 election and, if they win the vote, into government. Critics and economists alike will pore over the plan's numbers once released.

In the meantime, the Liberals want to frame Conservative Prime Minister Stephen Harper as a right-wing zealot who will not only destroy the economy but change Canada into "Bush lite" north, a party spokesperson said as the campaign heads into the third week.

"You can put a sweater on Mr. Harper but it is still Mr. Harper underneath that sweater. His direction and where he is taking this country is something that scares many people in this country," Mark Dunn said.

Part of the Liberal plan is to show voters that Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion and Harper are "polar opposites," with Harper refusing to appear at events open to the public.

The Conservatives said in a statement yesterday that, over the past 13 days, Liberal leader Stéphane Dion has promised an average of $6.1 billion per day, or $71,000 per second, in spending.

"Stéphane Dion is spending more money per second than an average Canadian household makes in an entire year! How does he plan to pay for his reckless spending spree — by raising taxes, or by forcing Canada back into deficit?" the Conservatives said in a statement.

College pulled into federal riding race

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

John Baird's Liberal challenger in Ottawa West-Nepean yesterday attacked his rival's record on funding skilled trades, but the incumbent said money for a local training centre is still available through transfer payments.

"It's unfortunate that when it comes to delivering for this important initiative we have, once again, seen more empty words by local MP John Baird," said David Pratt, Baird's Liberal opponent in the federal election.

"If elected, I will be tireless in my efforts to secure funding for Algonquin College's centre for construction trades and building science because our city needs this facility to secure our economic growth," Pratt said.

Pratt said he was told that the college still needs around $11 million to get a skilled trades centre after the city donated land on the west side of Woodroffe Avenue, and Premier Dalton McGuinty pledged $35 million towards the project.

Pratt said no money has come directly from the federal government, despite a press release sent by Baird in May entitled John Baird

"Despite the strongly worded headline, Mr. Baird was unable to deliver a single dollar for this important project," Pratt said.

Baird, the federal environment minister, countered, saying the federal government has made numerous increases to provincial funding that can be used for things such as the trades centre.

In 2006, the federal government gave $290 million to Ontario for post-secondary education infrastructure and in March it transferred $358 million to pay for projects through the Community Development Trust.

"I have always said that I am supportive of this important initiative as I am concerned about the massive shortage of skilled trades workers in Canada," said Baird.

New Democratic Party Leader Jack Layton and federal NDP candidate for Gatineau, Françoise Boivin, share a laugh while doing some door-to-door canvassing in Boivin's riding yesterday.

NDP trail reaches Gatineau

TRACEY TONG
tracey.tong@metronews.ca

Election 2008

The New Democrats' campaign in Gatineau got a boost yesterday when the party's leader, Jack Layton, joined in on the door-to-door canvassing efforts.

Layton and Françoise Boivin, the federal NDP candidate for Gatineau, met with supporters in Gatineau's Touraine sector. The visit was Layton's third to Gatineau since the election call (he launched his campaign there), and was his second door-to-door canvassing effort in town.

The NDP is showing Quebec particular attention as they look to build on their team's unexpected September 2007 win in the province, when Tomas Mulcair took the Montreal-area riding of Outremont in a byelection.

Such a high-profile visit is wonderful for candidates in the area, said Boivin's campaign manager, Ursula Strolenberg.

"Madame Boivin is very well recognized in the area, but it never hurts to have the leader here," she said. "We have to find new ways of drawing (interest)."

Supporters came out to greet Layton and Boivin, who answered questions, including what kinds of programs are needed for families and seniors.

"Each riding has the same general issues — economy, the environment and health," said Boivin.

With three weeks to go before the election, Boivin feels that the NDP can do well in Gatineau. "I feel it can take the place of the Bloc," Boivin said.

Added Layton: "I think the values of Quebecers and the values of the New Democratic Party in Canada are very similar."

Layton said the NDP is going to push to make all handguns illegal.

"There will be the 100 per cent ban on import and sale of handguns," he said.

"We have to get more serious about gang-related offences and help youth stay out of gangs."

Canada Army Run off to best-ever start for a race

FUNDRAISER More than 7,000 runners made the first-ever Canada Army Run the biggest-ever first-time running event in the country's history.

"It takes most races years and years to attract these numbers," said Lynne Bermel, of the run's organizing committee.

"It shows that Canadians support the troops."

Ottawa residents weren't the only ones behind the event. The city declared yesterday Army Run Day, and the event drew participants from as far as Barbados, as well as military personnel from the U.S.

About two dozen injured soldiers also led both the five-kilometre and the half-marathon races.

Proceeds from the race went towards helping rehabilitate injured soldiers, as well as aiding the Military Families Fund.

Although participants paid an entry fee this year, next year, they will be given the option to fundraise.

"When we started, we thought it would be wonderful if we could get 2,500 or 3,000 people," Bermel said.

"It went way beyond our wildest expectations. It was sold out. We never in a million years thought it would be this big."

Nearly the end of the line for Nadine

OnTrack

Nadine Doolittle

I have some good news and some bad news. I wrote a book two years ago that has unexpectedly been picked up by a Calgary-based publisher and is coming out in November. That's the good news. The bad news is this means I'll be leaving Metro Ottawa and this column space at the end of this month.

Feeling nostalgic, I revisited the mailbag to take a look at the issues that provoked the biggest reaction from On Track readers this year. Was it the proposed downtown tunnel? Or the lack of express in the express? Perhaps the fare increase and reduced service really got their goat?

Nope.

Consistently, what really seems to send OC Transpo riders over the edge is basic bus etiquette — or more specifically, the lack thereof.

Following my column 'Bus chivalry dead' (May 19) the e-mails flooded in — five messages for every one received on any other topic. Lengthy, eloquent messages on the hot real estate in 'Courtesy Seating.' Who knew?

To me, a designated seat is a 'rental.' It's yours until someone who needs it boards the bus and then it's not. When I wrote the column I assumed that every savvy public transit user worth their salt had this knowledge embedded in their DNA.

Wrong

again. Numerous related incidents of riders who had plopped their lazy derrières on courtesy seats, ignoring all indications of pregnancy, visible disability or senior citizenry in the riders around them.

Some responses suggested the bus operator take an active role in getting these people out of the seats.

But I think a cheaper and more efficient solution is to just sit on them. Maybe then they'll get the message.

In a tight race for second place in reader response, the winner was 'Queued-up buses hide route numbers' (July 14) for generating mail. It seems there are a lot of riders in the downtown core getting their daily aerobic exercise running back and forth looking for their bus. And just when you think they aren't listening, OC Transpo announced the installation of electronic signs that will display buses arriving at stops along the Albert-Slater corridor. Potential vandalism notwithstanding, commuters boarding downtown will have to get their exercise the old-fashioned way in 2009 and join a gym.

Next week, I weigh in with my own personal peeve (the only thing that really, really bugs me about the system) and cough up my wish list for Ottawa's transit future.

Nadine Doolittle is an award-winning writer and a public transit user for the past 35 years.

Women retain homemaker role as work responsibilities grow: Study

BRIAN TOWIE

Neelam, 38, gets up at 4:45 a.m. to cook two days worth of meals for her sleeping family. She gets her nine-year-old son up at 6 a.m. By 7:15, she has dropped him off at school and is racing for the train that takes her to her nine-to-five job in Toronto as a team leader at a paycheque distribution company.

At 7:15 p.m., Neelam, who asked that her last name not be published, arrives home to find Dad with Junior, going over homework. They sit down to a family meal that takes 20 minutes to eat, usually in front of the TV. If Neelam's

Dad's role changing, too

- Fifty per cent of dads say they spend more time with their children than their fathers did, especially British and Spanish fathers at 57 per cent.
- Half of all dads surveyed believe men should be entitled to more paternity leave, while 60 per cent of parents said parents should be able to decide how to spend their maternity and paternity entitlements.

day job hasn't followed her home, she's afforded the luxury of roughly one hour with her family (which often entails making sure Junior's homework is done before he hits the sack at 8:30 p.m.) and maybe a book before everyone heads to bed at 10 p.m. — to do it all over again the next day.

Neelam's case isn't unique. Living La Vida Rápida, a worldwide parenting study exclusively released to Metro's 100 dailies around the world by media research group OMD/AOL, partnering with Ipsos, concludes that while women's responsibilities in the workplace are growing, their traditional homemaker roles remain the same. The survey questioned parents from 13 countries — including the U.K., U.S., Russia, China and Canada — and found career moms can fit 27 hours worth of activity into 24 hours. Working mothers surveyed said they provide 66 per cent of the day-to-day parenting, compared to 74 per cent for non-working moms. Dads provided 36 per cent of the parental care.

It takes a toll on motherhood. Neelam says she plays the role of sergeant major instead of a sympathetic caregiver. "I don't have as much time to spend as I would like with my son as a mom," says Neelam. "I'm the one who has to make him do things he doesn't want to do."

It's a sentiment echoed by co-worker Sarvjit, 33, also a team manager. "It's just faster for me to do it all myself than waste time trying to find help," she adds.

Career moms like Sarvjit, left, and Neelam fit 27 hours worth of activities in their 24-hour work and family day.

Poverty no longer the top provincial priority

QUEEN'S PARK In the midst of a crashing economy and a federal election, the return to the legislature of Canada's second-largest government today might not attract much attention.

But Briar Perrier will be watching. She's only nine years old, but already there's one issue she cares deeply about: Poverty.

"People should have safe, affordable housing and food and warm clothes and beds," said Briar, whose mother Bridget is still working to lift the family out of poverty.

A comprehensive plan to tackle poverty was supposed to be a top priority, but with the downturn in the economy, Premier Dalton McGuinty has signalled he may not be doing as much as planned.

That's got activists from the young, like Briar, to established groups, like the 25 in 5 coalition, trying to hold McGuinty to his bold words: "I believe it's one of the best tests of government ... How are we treating those who are less fortunate?"

Ads need commentary

Behind-the-scenes chatter could uncover 'true' meaning

AdVentures

Mike Tennant

What campaign attack ads need is a commentary track, just like the ones that come on DVDs and Blu-ray discs, except these commentaries would tell you what the people behind them are really thinking.

Take the Tory ad warning about "gambling" on Stéphane Dion. A slot machine produces three images of Dion, punch line: Gamble on Dion and — wait for it — you lose. Switch to a commentary track and I bet you'd hear this:

"Welcome to a 30-second world where Stephen Harper is utterly perfect and Stéphane Dion is absolutely incompetent. Oh, and if you don't mind horribly, we're going to treat you like an idiot, incapable of supporting us on our merits.

"Let's face it — there's no second prize in an election; we can't afford to admit we're mere mortals, or to let you like Mr. Dion, even a little.

"And, frankly, we'd much rather ridicule Mr. Dion than talk about handguns, child poverty, or what Gerry Ritz passes off as a sense of humour."

And the Grits? The Liberal's new "Harper-nomics" ad accuses the Conservatives of codling corporate polluters, cutting development programs and engaging in divide-and-conquer politics. Its commentary track might say:

"If you think we can convey complicated economic policy in 30 seconds, you're out of your gourd, pal. So let's stick with name calling. 'Harper-nomics' packs imagery of Ronald Reagan and '80s trickle-down economics into four tidy syllables. How's that for economy?"

"We, too, will treat you like a moron, playing hopeful music and showing pretty pictures when we talk about ourselves, and draining colour from the pictures when we talk about

Mr. Harper. Remember how all the bad guys in Ben-Hur and Star Wars had British accents so you could tell them apart? Same idea.

"With luck, it will help you forget that little matter of the billion dollars we misplaced in Quebec in the '90s, or that we signed the Kyoto Accord, and — whoops — forgot to act on it.

"Confidentially, we know Canada won't really slide into the sea if you elect the Tories. But until more Canadians tear themselves away from House and So You Think You Can Dance long enough to study issues and attend candidates' meetings, these asinine attack ads are all we've got.

"Besides, if all our ads were positive, do you really believe we'd still get all that free airplay from the talking heads on those political panel shows?"

Green train begins nationwide trek

It's a safe bet that in the old days of whistle-stop campaigning, few politicians gave speeches on train platforms in the middle of the night.

But that's exactly what Green party Leader Elizabeth May has planned in her cross-country train ride, which pulled out of Vancouver's Pacific Central Station last night.

The first nocturnal rally was at 1:50 a.m. today, at the platform of the Kamloops North station in B.C. Two others will be held in the early morning tomorrow, including a 4:30 a.m. rally at the Melville station in Saskatchewan.

Organizers of May's Vancouver to Truro, N.S., train ride say that's the only chance Green party members in those towns have to see their leader. And they've bought tickets to make sure "The Canadian," as this section of the Via Rail train is called, makes a stop.

The journey will end in Truro — 91 stops later, potentially. At many stations, the train only stops if tickets there have been bought 48 hours ahead of time, according to a Via spokesperson.

May started her train tour

Elizabeth May hops aboard the Green Train in Vancouver yesterday. The train will pass through communities along the Via Rail line during the Green party's zero-carbon election campaign.

"Wake up, throw off the cynicism, throw off the apathy."

Elizabeth May

with a pre-boarding rally in front of Pacific Central Station, arriving in an electric-powered car to the sounds of bagpipes and the cheers of about 120 supporters.

She welcomed them to "the great beginning of the Green train across Canada." She told supporters that "the Green campaign more than anything else is about democracy," and described the train ride as a way of reconnecting with the country's roots.

Recent polls have placed Green party support at about 11 per cent. But many of those are young voters, often the most difficult to get to the ballot box.

At the rally, May urged Canadians to "wake up, throw off the cynicism, throw off the apathy" and vote.

The last time politicians used trains as the main mode of travel in federal election campaigns was in the mid-1960s.

Poll says Tories could win majority

SURVEY The Conservatives have a large lead over the Liberals and stand a good chance of winning a majority in the Oct. 14 federal election, according to a poll released Saturday.

The Ipsos Reid survey for CanWest News Service put the Conservatives at 40 per cent public support, up two percentage points from a poll by the same company a week ago. The Liberals dropped two points to 27 per cent while the New Democrats climbed two points to 15 per cent.

It was the latest in a string of polls showing the Conservatives — who hold just 127 of the 308 seats in Parliament — will do much better Oct. 14.

The party took power after an election in January 2006.

The Ipsos Reid survey of 1,000 Canadians was conducted between Sept. 16 and 18 and is considered accurate to within 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20.

Harper heading west

Prime minister shifting focus onto leadership and stability

Prime Minister Stephen Harper heads this week to Western Canada and will swing back through Ontario, trying to shift focus back onto leadership and stability, after the Conservative campaign hit another bump with the weekend resignation of Toronto Centre candidate Chris Reid.

Harper will continue to make one "practical" announcement a day, which this week will highlight public safety and "assurance" issues for voters, while he will sharpen his attacks on his political opponents, the campaign says.

Even as it tries to gauge the fallout from last week's revelation of a minister's black-humour wisecracks during the listeria crisis, the Harper campaign contends it had a good week and Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion had a bad one, resorting to bringing out "ringers, leadership rivals, to try to help prop up the party," in the words of one official.

Harper intends to try to highlight the costs of promises made by the other parties, while drawing a contrast with the Conservatives' steady trickle of "modest" and "affordable" measures.

With the economy continuing to dominate headlines, Harper is repeating the phrase "global economic uncertainty" in almost every utterance, stressing his leadership.

The campaign does not intend to release a platform document until much later, a summary and costing of promises made over the course of the five-week election campaign.

$700B market bailout is necessary evil: Paulson

U.S. Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson pressed his case for an unprecedented $700 billion US bailout of financial markets yesterday as negotiations over the plan opened between the administration and Congress.

The sweeping proposal would have the Treasury buy up bad mortgage-related debts from financial institutions, including U.S. subsidiaries of foreign banks, to try to stem the worst financial storm since the Great Depression.

Two key questions, however, remained unanswered even after Paulson appeared on four national television talk shows. What price will the United States pay for these toxic debts, which spawned a global credit crisis. When will it start buying them?

Paulson painted the proposed intervention into private markets as a necessary evil, arguing the consequences of inaction would be so dire that the large burden taxpayers would shoulder would be worth it.

"This is not something that we wanted to do. This was something that was

"This is not something that we wanted to do. This was something that was very necessary."

very necessary," Paulson said on the NBC Sunday program Meet the Press.

"We did this to protect the taxpayer."

New York Sen. Charles Schumer, a member of the Democratic leadership, said Democrats would not load up the bill with numerous extraneous provisions and said a measure to give a lift to the economy would likely be moved separately.

Still, speaking to reporters on Capitol Hill, Schumer and Senate Banking Committee Chairman Christopher Dodd said the plan needed stronger taxpayer protections and needed to do more to help distressed homeowners. In addition, they said more oversight of the program was essential.

"We totally understand the gravity of the moment ... but you cannot just turn over $700 billion of taxpayer money and not insist that the taxpayer is going to be protected," Dodd said.

Al Qaeda suspected of Marriott bombing

PAKISTAN A suicide bomb attack that killed 53 people at the Marriott Hotel in Pakistan's capital of Islamabad bore the hallmarks of an operation by al Qaeda or an affiliate, Pakistani and U.S. intelligence officials said yesterday.

Teams combing the burnt shell of the hotel found more charred bodies after the blast on Saturday evening ignited a blaze that swept through the hotel, part of a U.S.-based chain and a favourite haunt of diplomats and wealthy Pakistanis.

Internal security in Pakistan, a country vital to the war against al Qaeda and other Islamist militant groups, has deteriorated alarmingly over the past two years.

"The sophistication of the blast shows it's the work of al Qaeda," a Pak-

Inviting target?

- The hotel is Pakistani-owned, but Marriott is a U.S. franchise. There is only one other five-star hotel in Islamabad.
- It has been targeted twice before. In January 2007 a security guard died stopping a suicide bomber from sneaking in through a side entrance hours before a reception hosted by the Indian High Commission. An earlier, small blast in the lobby area failed to kill anyone.

Blaze in dance hall kills 43

TRAGEDY A fire at an illegal dance club in Shenzhen China, just across the border from Hong Kong, left 43 mostly young people dead and another 88 injured, another grim reminder of the country's broken regulatory system.

The fire broke out just before midnight at the packed King of the Dancers club, sparked by a pyrotechnics display on the third floor, Xinhua quoted local police as saying.

The owner of the club, located about an hour's taxi ride from downtown Shenzhen, was being questioned by police, while 12 people had been detained, said Xinhua.

The main hall quickly filled with deadly smoke after the roman candle-type display touched ceiling tiles, and the lights went off soon after — plunging panicking revellers into darkness, said witnesses.

"The fire wasn't that big, but there was a lot of smoke," said a man named Zhang, who said he worked at the club.

"Everyone was crowding towards the front entrance, because they didn't know about the (exit) in the back," said Zhang.

Forests a critical 'hedge'

Better ways needed to manage activities and services

ScienceMatters

David Suzuki &
Dr. Faisal
Moola

A forest is much more than the timber it holds. A forest provides habitat for wildlife, recreational opportunities and scrubs carbon dioxide from the atmosphere.

How much is a forest worth? And how do we calculate that value? Do we simply count the trees and figure out how much we could get for them if we were to cut them down and turn them into logs, lumber, and pulp and paper?

That's been the traditional approach, but it hasn't served us well. A forest is much more than the timber it holds. A forest provides habitat for wildlife, recreational opportunities for hikers and hunters, a place for quiet contemplation, and filtration and storage of drinking water. And because forests scrub carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and store it in their trees and soils, they are a critical "hedge" against global warming.

When we take into account all the ecological benefits, or services, a forest provides, we have to re-evaluate the way we make decisions about how we manage them. Clear-cutting an old-growth forest may provide temporary jobs and profits, as well as two-by-fours to build homes and furniture, but if it also results in the release of carbon stored in the trees and soil, thus contributing to global warming, or if it wipes out the habitat of an animal that is crucial to the natural order, then the short-term gains may not be worthwhile.

Two new reports illustrate the idea of taking into account the full suite of values that a forest represents, or its "natural capital," when making decisions about resource management. Dollars and Sense: The Economic Rationale to Protect the Spotted Owl Habitat in British Columbia, and The Real Wealth of the Mackenzie Region: Assessing the Natural Capital Values of a Northern Boreal Ecosystem both argue for a more holistic approach to managing our natural ecosystems.

For a long time, we've only considered the immediate market value of resources when making forest-use decisions. In doing so, we've ignored the enormous value of the ecosystem services that are critical to biodiversity, human health, and community well-being. Although it's not easy to put a dollar value on things such as carbon sequestration and storage, water filtration, clean-water availability, and species diversity, it's foolish to leave them out of the equation.

Taking into account all the values of a forest doesn't mean an end to logging and mining; it just means finding better ways to manage all our activities in these ecosystems — and it means putting a value on the very real services they provide. If we don't address the serious problems of global warming and biodiversity loss, as well as issues such as access to clean air and water, we may well join the spotted owl on the endangered list.

Scientists turn to rubber ducks to track melting glacier

To help figure out what's happening inside the fastest-moving Greenland glacier, a U.S. rocket scientist sent 90 rubber ducks into the ice, hoping someone finds them if they emerge in Baffin Bay.

The common yellow plastic bath toys are one part of a sophisticated experiment to determine why glaciers speed up in the summer in their march to the sea, said Alberto Behar of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California.

The Jakobshavn Glacier is very likely the source of the iceberg that sank the Titanic in 1912 and researchers focus on it because it discharges nearly 7 per cent of all the ice coming off Greenland. As the planet warms, its melting ice sheet could make oceans rise this century. "It's a beautiful place to visit. You can watch these icebergs continuously march across and fall into the ocean," Behar said.

What you can't see is how melting water moves through the ice.

"Right now it's not understood what causes the glaciers themselves to surge in the summer," Behar said.

Homework: I'll just get to it later

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

Save this article for later. You do have e-mails to check, wall posts to make on Facebook, an afternoon shift and a friend's gig to go to tonight. Plus, you'll get to it right afterward ... right?

Not quite, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education. The college and university focused newspaper reports 70 per cent of post-secondary students usually procrastinate. Compare that to the general population, of whom only 20 per cent put tasks off and students start looking like the young slackers they're reputed to be.

But before writing off more than one-million students who returned to college and university this month, comparing their circumstances to preceding pupils might help explain just why so many of them delay.

Students are much more likely to put off tasks than the general population, studies suggest.

"Students have way more things on their plate now than they did 10 or 15 years ago. They are balancing a lot more than a student club," says Christie Goode.

She's the Vancouver-based creator of Home-workTree.com, a new on-line planning resource for post-secondary students that help them to allocate time to complete assignments and offers homework tips.

Goode says the context of university creates a perfect environment for procrastination. "(University) is a unique environment that breeds this possibility. It's a social and work context that doesn't happen in other areas of life." She chalks up that circumstantial distinction to the abundance of long-term deadlines, extra-curricular activities and free time only typical of students.

In spite of the education-tie, Goode says student procrastination can put more than just grades at risk. Health impacts like higher stress and depression and ethical impacts like increased cheating and plagiarism are just some of the added consequences Goode says procrastination leads to.

To avoid such dangers, she suggests becoming gradually more intentional about assignments. "Exercising a little bit of discipline every week to reach a goal goes a long way in exercising that muscle." The "muscle" is self-control, says Goode, a function Australia's Macquarie University found can be strengthened through exercise like any muscle in your body.

Let's twist again...

Diane Peters

Debbie Stevens twists balloons to entertain kids. But she could capture the imagination of little ones long before she knew how to make a balloon dog.

The stay-at-home mom ran a homecare back in the mid 1980s. She became known around her neighbourhood in Bowmanville, Ont., for her storytelling and ability to connect with kids.

One day, a friend asked her to provide the entertainment for a birthday party. Stevens performed magic, told stories and ran games. That led to more parties. Needing more tricks, she got a book from the library on balloon animals. She took to this unusual art form right away.

"Within a few weeks I got bored and came up with my own designs," says Stevens, 44.

Eventually, Stevens got hired to sculpt balloons at corporate events. Through those, the Toronto Maple Leafs hired her to work the lobby of Maple Leaf Gardens (that was in 1999, the team's last year in the arena). She handed out her business card and got a lot more work.

When she does events, Stevens twists anywhere from three to 12 balloons to make animals, cartoon characters like Spiderman or Buzz Lightyear, or even create a wearable costume. "When I create, I'm not just making a balloon. I'm telling jokes, I'm bonking kids on the head with balloons, it's very animated," says Stevens. She adores children and considers keeping them amused just as important as twisting.

At home, Stevens will spend hours designing new creations. She uses a picture of a cartoon character or real-life animal, or sometimes just invents out of her imagination.

Balloon work relies on about a dozen moves: loops, bubbles, spirals and various weaves. Stevens figured out the basics from that first book and picked up more at a balloon-twisting conference in 2003.

In 2005, Stevens created a live black-lit show using music, huge balloon creations and the help of her two sons and husband onstage while her daughter acts as stage manager. Recently, since her two sons are in university, she's started a solo show that runs with her 14-year-old daughter's assistance.

Yes, The Twisted Ones is now a full-time business. Stevens spends weekdays doing administrative work and designing while the weekends are booked solid with gigs.

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

Boss satisfaction riding high

The need for more inspiration and strong leadership in the workplace is increasingly critical in today's economic climate, according to a new nationwide survey of more than 8,700 workers by CareerBuilder.com.

Forty-five per cent of workers said they don't feel secure in the C-level leadership of their organizations. While the majority of workers (73 per cent) are satisfied with the performance of their direct supervisor, only 50 per cent categorized the performance of senior management as good or great. More than half said they don't feel motivated within their organizations and expressed a desire for more personal attention and development.

While bosses ranked higher in overall character, they ranked lower in leadership. Seventy-three per cent of workers categorized their boss as trustworthy, 70 per cent said their boss is respected in the organization and 65 per cent reported their boss communicates effectively. On the other hand, 51 per cent feel their boss does not motivate them, 51 per cent said their boss does not help them move ahead and 41 per cent stated they don't learn from their bosses.

"Leaders need to invest in the career development of workers and reinforce the value that employees bring to their business to create a healthy and open workplace culture," said Jason Ferrara, vice-president of corporate marketing at CareerBuilder.com. Thirty per cent of workers surveyed report that they think they could do their boss' job better and said the following were their primary issues with their bosses:

- Plays favourites (23 per cent);
- Doesn't lead by example (23 per cent);
- Is never around (14 per cent)
- Never provides positive feedback (13 per cent).

Although it got off to a comically rocky start, the 60th Primetime Emmy Awards successfully picked up steam last night with John Adams, 30 Rock and Entourage picking up early awards.

HBO's John Adams won the night's award for Outstanding Miniseries. Acting honours for the show's roles went to Laura Linney for Outstanding Lead Actress in a Miniseries or Movie and Tom Wilkinson for the same category's Supporting Actor award. The show also won the award for Outstanding Writing for a Miniseries, Movie or Dramatic Special.

Tina Fey won the award for Outstanding Writing in a Comedy Series for 30 Rock, her third Emmy to date. Jeremy Piven maintained Emmy steam, winning his third consecutive award for Outstanding Supporting Actor in a Comedy Series for Entourage, with the equivalent female award going to Jean Smart of Samantha Who?

Dramatic award presentations started with Dianne Wiest winning the award for Outstanding Supporting Actress in a Drama Series for her role in In Treatment. Zeljko Ivanek of Damages fame walked away with the Emmy for Outstanding Supporting Actor in a Drama Series, the actor's first nomination and win.

The show opened with talk-show TV veteran Oprah Winfrey introducing the night's hosting quintet. The five inaugural nominees for the new Emmy category of Outstanding Host for a Reality Program took to the stage with a lukewarm opening display lacking chemistry and (more embarrassingly) audience laughs.

Tom Bergeron, Heidi Klum, Howie Mandel, Jeff Probst and Ryan Seacrest struggled through their awkward introduction before randomly inviting William Shatner from the audience. He and Bergeron proceeded to rip Klum's black-tie suit off her body, revealing a sparkling black ensemble, one of many costume changes for the fashion-focused Project Runway hostess.

Thankfully, British actor Ricky Gervais later redeemed any salvageable comedic value when he took aim at The Office's Steve Carell. Carell accepted an Emmy for an absent Gervais in 2007 and sat hilariously stone-faced at Gervais's demands of, "Give me my Emmy!" before pulling it from under his seat.

Josh Groban maintained excitement with a musical tribute to the history of American television. Groban charmingly delivered authentic renditions of themes from over 25 shows, including Friends, South Park, *M*A*S*H* and even COPS. Tributes were also made to memorable program locales like the diner in Seinfeld, Desperate Housewives' Wisteria Lane and the living room from The Simpsons.

It's undecided

The return for a second season of reality TV show Denise Richards: It's Complicated is still being decided, contrary to earlier reports, TV executives at E! have said. IMDB.COM

Suicide sparks family tragedy

Blue Genes

Author: Christopher Lukas

Publisher: Doubleday

Price: $27.95 (Hardcover)

In Blue Genes, Christopher "Kit" Lukas tells the real-life story of his family's past and the delicate relationship with his brother Tony. While Kit found his calling behind the scenes in television, Tony flourished as a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist. But, the suicide of a depressed Tony in 1997 recalled all too well the death of their mother by her own hand when they were just boys. Blue Genes allows Kit an outlet to reflect on how depression has ravaged the lives of those close to him and to navigate the difficult road toward escape.

Miss Chopsticks

Author: Xinran

Publisher: Vintage

Price: $21.95 (Paperback)

Inspired by Xinran's work as a journalist probing the lives of Chinese women in arranged marriages, Miss Chopsticks explores what it means to be female living in modern China. The novel introduces the Li sisters (named Three, Five and Six for their birth order) who quickly learn that it's a man's world. The three are brought up with ideas of women as serviceable compared to their male counterparts. When they move from their rural village to the big city of Nanjing, the sisters learn how the place is one of cultural metamorphosis and a breeding ground for change.

Heroes' high 'Q' factor

JUST FOR ONE DAY: The Q rating — one of those strange quasi-scientific phantasms of the marketing business — is a way of measuring the emotional appeal of anything from a politician to a breakfast cereal, and according to a recent study done by Marketing Evaluations Inc., the company that came up with the Q test back in the Mad Men era of 1963, Survivor, Heroes and House are the leading primetime Q scorers.

According to Marketing Evaluations, the Q score is an indicator of "the commitment that key viewers have to continue watching a show into the future," which would be a very big deal for a show like Heroes, which got off to a roaring first season and had its inevitable sophomore slump amplified rather sharply by having its second season cut in half by the writers' strike last winter, which forced a cut to a whole storyline.

Season two ended with the usual cliffhanger, one that felt like a pointed reference to the 1968 assassination of Robert F. Kennedy — Nathan Petrelli (Adrian Pasdar) lying on the ground with two bullets in his chest, cradled by his brother Peter, shot by an unknown gunman just as he was about to blow the lid on the whole mutant underground/The Company thing. Season three begins tonight four years in the future — some rain-slicked one where everyone dresses in black and slicks back their hair; why, I'm moved to ask not for the first time, does the future so often look like Berlin in the '80s?

Peter Petrelli (Milo Ventimiglia) is on the run from some shadowy mob, and ducks into the usual convenient empty warehouse to find Claire (Hayden Panettiere) pointing a gun at his head, obviously well pissed at him for some as-yet-unspecified king hell betrayal.

The preview disc I saw only included half of the 2-hour season premiere, but it set a brisk pace from the first minutes. There's a new side to Sylar, it seems, and Nathan gets religion. You didn't really think he was dead, did you?

He's not the only Lazarus, though, which highlights my biggest problem with the show; with all those powers ricocheting around, death is often just an inconvenient stumble, and you can usually count on any given corpse showing up later. It's the oldest comic book storyline switchback in the book, but it does absolutely nothing to ramp up the dramatic possibilities, since it lowers the stakes to negligible, somewhere between a videogame and the "They killed Kenny!" gag that even South Park saw fit to drop after a few seasons.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

She also posed for a Vanity Fair photoshoot that was deemed to be too saucy for a 15-year-old girl.

But Fox is outraged the young stars felt pressure to say sorry, insisting those responsible for exposing the candid snaps should be blamed and ashamed.

"I would never issue an apology for my life and for who I am," she tells GQ magazine. "It's like, 'Oh, I'm sorry, I took a naked, private picture that someone, who is an a-hole, sold for money.' Someone betrayed Vanessa, but no one's angry at that person. She had to apologize."

Sex-y role for Cyrus?

TV Sex and the City author Candace Bushnell wants teen sensation Miley Cyrus to play the young Carrie Bradshaw if her prequel novels are turned into movies or TV shows, imdb.com reports.

Bushnell has just signed a deal to pen two teen novels about her character Bradshaw's high school years and she'd love for Cyrus to take the lead in a TV or film spinoff.

When asked to name her new Carrie — a part Sarah Jessica Parker has played on the big and small screen — Bushnell said, "I don't know ... What about Miley Cyrus?"

And it appears Cyrus is game — in a recent interview she said, "I'd love to do a younger, cleaner version of Sex and the City."

"This makes no sense at all ..."

by Joe O'Neill

Stop the presses! Heather Mills does not regret her marriage to Sir Paul McCartney. More specifically, she does not regret failing to sign a pre-nup, and her reasons for this number approximately 50 million.

And, oh yeah, better throw the kid in there, too.

I sometimes suspect that Yoko Ono hired Heather to do what she did because Yoko was tired of her status of most hated person in history amongst Beatle fans, by which I mean approximately seventy-eight per cent of the population of the developed world.

If my suspicions are correct, Heather has earned her money.

Mills says she's ready to move on with her life and help with causes that are close to her heart. It's good to know that she will continue to do whatever it takes to ease the plight of 40-something, bottle-blond, one-legged "former models" who used to be married to Beatles bass players, against whom they've made false accusations of physical abuse.

Rest assured that Heather Mills, as long as she lives and breathes, will continue to make this world a better place. For Heather Mills, anyway.

And what of the couple's child, Beatrice, the little divorce court bargaining chip off the old block?

I'm a sucker for poetic justice, and if there's any in this case, Bea will grow up to become a fur-wearing, meat-eating, baby seal-clubbing land-mine vendor who walks around all day singing, "I am the walrus, coo coo cha choo!"

Mills: Paul marriage had reward

RELATIONSHIPS Former model Heather Mills does not regret her marriage to Beatles legend Paul McCartney — because she fell pregnant after years of heartache, imdb.com reports.

Mills and McCartney endured a messy public divorce earlier this year after six years of marriage. During their divorce battle, court papers leaked in which Mills falsely claimed McCartney was an abusive husband, a drunk and a wife-beater.

But now she has spoken out about their marriage and insists she does not regret it because it gave her a daughter.

Mills tells Britain's Daily Mail newspaper, "How would you feel if you had been through what I have?"

"But no, how can I regret something which gave us our beautiful daughter Beatrice? ... I could never regret something which gave me Beatrice."

"But I'm ready to move on in my life now. I'm not a negative person. I want to move on positively. I need to look at the bigger picture, which means helping those causes close to my heart."

Duchovny recovery a work in progress

REHAB Actor David Duchovny is "doing well" since admitting himself into rehab for sex addiction, according to one of his co-stars on hit U.S. TV show Californication, imdb.com reports.

The 48-year-old, who plays a sex-loving author in the raunchy cable show, checked himself into rehab last month in a bid to control his own sexual urges.

Actor Evan Handler has sent his best wishes to the star, and admits he's looking forward to getting back to work when Duchovny returns to the set.

He said, "The most I can say is that I hope he's doing really well — and I heard he is doing really well. I can't wait to go back on the set because the work experience is the best one that I've had."

When asked if Duchovny would attend the series' premiere Sept. 28,

Handler said: "I have no idea whether I'll see him there."

Wedding bells for Naomi Campbell?

MARRIAGE Naomi Campbell's billionaire boyfriend is preparing to propose to her, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Vladimir Doronin, who has been dating the super-model for several months, hinted he was ready to ask her to marry him at Campbell's recent charity catwalk show Fashion for Relief, but stopped short of revealing when he will pop the question.

"Naomi is wonderful. Will I put a ring on her finger? Maybe very soon," he said. Campbell, 38, recently revealed she refuses to discuss marriage in case it scares her beau.

Recipe of the day

Chicken Burgers with Tropical Fruit Salsa

These juicy chicken burgers, topped with a Caribbean-inspired salsa, are absolutely scrumptious.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 small pineapple
- 1 small mango, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 small red onion, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh coriander
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon canola oil
- 500 g ground chicken
- 1 large Granny Smith apple, peeled and shredded
- 1/4 cup dry breadcrumbs
- 4 thin slices reduced-fat Cheddar cheese
- 4 hamburger buns or soft rolls, preferably whole wheat, split
- 4 lettuce leaves

METHOD:

1. Peel, core, slice and chop the pineapple (you need 2 cups) and place in a bowl. Mix in the mango, onion, coriander, lemon juice and oil. Cover and set aside.
2. Mix the chicken, apple and breadcrumbs in another bowl until blended. Divide the mixture into 4 equal portions and shape into patties about 1 cm thick. Place the patties on a plate, cover, and place in the freezer for 20 minutes.

3. Preheat the barbecue. Cook the patties on medium heat until browned and cooked through.
4. For each burger, place a slice of cheese on the bottom of a hamburger bun, cover with lettuce, add a patty, top with about 1/2 cup salsa, and crown with the top of the bun.
